THE HILLS.

The giant hills repose, a mighty host,
Blind servitors of fate, for good or ill,
Unthinking, helpless, favored slaves at most,
Impassive workers of the Master's will.

Though free from labor of the hand or heart,
From man's dissension, greed and grief of joy,
Yet toiling subjects, with allotted part,
Like silent vehicle or childhood's toy.

All liberty is bondage of degree.
Apparent happiness may nourish pain.
Our freedom oft is but the turning key
In door that sorrow bids us close again.

The quiet mountains feed the springs of life,
That well or dry at heavenly command,
And flood or famine, loss or gain, is rife.
The hills contribute with subjective hand.

There lies in barren peak the timbered height,
A wealth beyond the optimistic dream,
But mortals grope until the way is light,
Till fortune smiles and earth reflects the beam.

Success and failure have unknown array.
The sun may scorch and clouds the rainbow show.
All hills are actors in a fateful play,
The mute, majestic serfs of weal or woe.
—Jean More in Atlanta Constitution.

AN UNKNOWN GRAVE.

Four men were seated upon a trader's veranda at Maduro, one of the Marshall islands. The night was brilliantly moonlit, and the hull and spars of a little white brig that lay anchored in the lagoon about a mile distant from the trader's house stood out as clearly and distinct as if she were but 50 yards away from where they sat.

Three of the men present were visitors—Ned Packenham, the captain; Harvey, the mate, and Denison, the supercargo of the Indiana. The fourth was the trader himself, a grizzled old wanderer of past 60.

It was long past midnight, and the old trader's numerous half caste family had turned in to sleep some hours before. It so happened that the old man had just been talking about a stalwart son of his who had died a few months previously, and Packenham and Denison, to whom the lad had been well known, asked his father where the boy had been buried.

"In there," replied the old man, pointing to a small white walled inclosure about a stone's throw from where we were sitting. "There's a good many graves there now. Let me see. There is Dawney, the skipper of the Maid of Samoa, and three of his crew; Peterson, the Dutchman—him that got a bullet into him for fooling around too much with a pistol in his hand and challenging natives to fight when he was drunk; two or three of my wife's relatives, who wanted to be buried in my boneyard because they thought to make me some return for keeping their families after they were dead; my boy Tom and the white woman."

"White woman?" said the mate of the brig. "Did a white woman die here?"

"I'll tell you all I do know, and a —— queer yarn it is too. In those days I was the only white man here. I got on very well with the natives and was doing a big business. There were not many whaleships here then, but every ten months or so a vessel came here from Sydney, and I was making money hand over fist.

"The house in which I then lived stood farther away toward the point, in rather a clearer spot than this. You can see the place from here and also see that a house standing in such a position would be visible not only from all parts of the inside beaches of the lagoon, but from the sea as well.

"My wife—not the present one, you know—was a Bonin island half bred Portuguese woman, and as she generally talked to me in English and had no native ways to speak of we used to sit outside in the evenings pretty often and watch our kids and the village people dancing and otherwise amusing themselves on the beach.

"Rotau, the head chief of this lagoon, one night told us that a canoe had come from Milli, an island about three days' sail to the leeward of Waller's place, and reported that a ship had passed quite close to their island about a week before.

"After we had sat talking for awhile my wife called the children in and put them to sleep, and Rotau and I and his wives sat outside a bit longer smoking. It was a moonlight night, almost as bright as it is tonight, and the sea was as smooth as a mill pond—so smooth, in fact, that there was not even a break upon the reef, and, the trade wind having died away, there was not the sound of a leaf stirring in the palm grove.

"We had been sitting like this for about half an hour, when Nora, my wife, just as she was coming out of the door to join us, gave a cry.

"'Te Kaibuke! Look at the ship.'

"I jumped up and looked, and there, sure enough, was a big ship just showing round the point and close in, not more than a mile away from the reef.

"For a moment I was a bit scared, remembering that there was not a breath of wind and yet seeing her moving. Then I remembered the current and knew that she must have run up to the land from the westward before dark perhaps, and that as soon as the breeze had died away the current, which runs about four knots, had caught her and was now moving her along. I took her to be either a Yankee or British North American.

"Just as I had asked Rotau to get one of his women to hunt up a boat's crew he sang out: 'Listen, Ted. I hear a boat.'

"In another moment or two I heard it myself plain enough—click clack, click clack—and at the same time saw that the ship was heading away from the land.

"I knew the ship was right enough and could not get into any danger, as the current would take her clear of the land in another hour or so, so we all went to the point to see where the boat was coming.

"As soon as she was within 100 yards of the beach I hailed them to keep a bit to starboard, as there was a big coral bowlder right in front of the spot they were steering for.

"'Aye, aye!' answered the man steering, and he did as I told him. In another minute or two the boat shot up on the beach, and we crowded round them.

"'Stand back, please,' says the officer, speaking in a curious, hurried kind of way, and then I saw that he had a pistol in his left hand, and that the men with him looked white and scared, and seemed to take no notice of us.

"Two of the men jumped out, and then we saw that there was another person in the boat—a woman. She was sitting on the bottom boards, lying against the stern sheets, and seemed to be either asleep or dead. The officer helping them, they lifted her up and out of the boat and carried her ashore. Then the officer turns to me, and I saw that though he tried to speak quietly he was in a flurry over something.

"'What's all this?' I said. 'What's the matter? What have you got this pistol in your hand for, and what is the matter with this woman?'

"He put the pistol out of sight pretty quick, and then, speaking so rapidly I could hardly follow him, said that the lady was the captain's wife, and she had been taken ill very suddenly, and her husband, seeing my house so close to, had determined to send her ashore and see if anything could be done for her.

"'That's —— queer,' I said. 'Why didn't he come with her himself? Look here—I don't believe all this. How did he know, even though the house is here, that a white man lives in it? And I want to have a look at the woman's face. She might be dead for all I know.'

"By this time my wife and one of Rotau's wives had gone up to the woman, and I saw that, although she wasn't dead, she looked very like it, for her eyes were closed, and she seemed quite unconscious of all that was going on. She was young—about 25 or so—and was rather pretty.

"'Please take her to your house,' says the officer, and as soon as we have towed the ship out of danger the captain will come ashore and see you.'

"'Hold on!' says I, and I grabbed him by the arm. 'Do you mean to say you're going off in this fashion without telling me anything further? Who are you anyway? What is the ship's name?'

"He hesitated just a second and then said: 'The Inca Prince, Captain Broughton. But I can't stay to talk now. The captain himself will tell you about it in the morning.'

"And then, before I could stop him, he jumped back out of my reach into the boat, and the four sailors, two of whom were niggers of some sort, shoved off, and away they went again.

"Well, we carried the woman up to the house and placed her on a bed, and the moment my wife took off the woolen wrapper that covered her head and shoulders she cried out that there was blood running down her neck. And it didn't take me long to discover that the woman was dying from a bullet wound in the back of her head.

"We did all that we possibly could for the poor thing, but she never regained consciousness, and toward sunrise she died quietly. There was nothing about her clothing to show who she was, but she wore rings such as would belong to a woman of some position. That she had been murdered I could not doubt, and perhaps some day, even after all these years, the crime may come to light."

"But what became of the ship?" asked the mate of the Indiana.

"Out of sight by 8 o'clock in the morning. As soon as I saw what was the matter with the woman I knew that we need not expect to see any one from the ship back again."

"I wonder what the true story of that woman's death was?" said Packenham thoughtfully as he looked toward the place where she was buried.

"Heaven only knows," answered the old trader. "Whether it was a mutiny and her husband was murdered, or whether the officer who came ashore with her was the captain himself and her husband as well I cannot tell. Anyway, I have since learned that there never was a ship named the Inca Prince. I've told the story to every shipmaster I've met since that night, and it was written about a good deal in the English and American newspapers. Then the affair was forgotten, and, like many another such thing, the secret may never come out."—London Chronicle.

Steel Plates For Boilers.

The progress made in engineering is notably exhibited in the fact that of late years iron plates for the construction of boilers have been almost entirely superseded by homogeneous steel plates, these having a greater tensile strength than iron plates and a greater elasticity and ductility. The standard tests now require a tensile strength of from 55,000 to 60,000 pounds per square inch—that is, the quality of the steel plate is required to be such that a bar one inch square would necessitate a force of 60,000 pounds to pull it asunder, and in such process the ductility of the steel would cause it to stretch somewhat, so that at the point of fracture there would be a marked reduction of area in the bar, the amount of this reduction deciding in a great measure the quality of the steel as adapted to boiler construction. In making specifications for boilers, therefore, especially for high pressures, it has come to be a condition that the steel plates shall be of the above named tensile strength per square inch, and that the reduction of area at the point of fracture under a test like the above shall be not less than 56 per cent—that is, the metal stretched under the test or strain so that, on breaking, it was less than one-half the original area of the bar. Such tests determine the quality and ability of the steel plates when made up into a boiler to adjust themselves to the expansion and contraction of the metal caused by the varying temperatures to which the boiler is subjected when it is set up and put in use.

Orator O'Rourke's Kick.

Jim O'Rourke, the famous "orator," when in the League as a member of the New York baseball team never had the reputation of being a kicker, but upon one occasion he made a protest that will always be remembered by players who were on the team with him. In a game which was umpired by Phil Powers Jim hit a ball over the fence. It was foul by about a foot, but Jeems, thinking it was a home run, began to tear around the bases like a runaway horse. When he reached the plate in a breathless state, yet wearing a look of triumph on his classic countenance, O'Rourke learned to his discomfiture that the umpire had called the ball a foul.

"Why, Philly," exclaimed Jim in the mildest of tones, "that wasn't a foul!"

"Yes, Jimmy, I'm sorry to say it was," said Powers, with assurance.

"Why, Phil," remarked Jim rather seriously, "it was five feet fair."

"Oh, no, it wasn't, Jim. It was a dead foul," explained the umpire.

"Why, Mr. Powers!" protested the orator, growing slightly warm under the collar, "I am conversant with the conglomeration of facts in this case, and as my optical eyesight is of extreme excellence I am positive of your misinformation."

This was a staggerer for Powers, but he struggled gamely with this reply:

"Mr. O'Rourke, you're not entitled to a home run. You must bat over again."

"See here, Powers," ejaculated the now thoroughly excited player, "I'll not allow you to rob me in this matter."

"See here, O'Rourke," retorted Powers, "if you give me any more talk I'll have to fine you." Then O'Rourke found solace in a burst of eloquence which sounded something like this:

"Why, you miserable, groveling, sycophantic, phosphorescent, unconstitutional viper, I've half a mind to excommunicate, extradite, separate, elucidate, prevaricate and eject you from this beautiful ball ground and this eccentric National league."

Powers was by this time tempted to reverse his decision, but O'Rourke, who was too quick for him, went out on a fly ball.—New York Sun.

Largest Yoke of Cattle.

Joe and Jerry are the names of the largest yoke of cattle ever seen in America. They are the property of J. D. Avery of Buckland, Mass., and they are 8 years old and measure 10 feet in girth. They are 17 hands high, and from tip to tip their measurement is 15 feet 11 inches. The two together weigh 7,300 pounds. They are beautifully colored, are models of symmetry, and are extremely docile and gentle. They have been exhibited at all the largest agricultural fairs in the country. They are black and white, like all pure Holsteins. The yoke they wear is said to be the largest ever made, and is 7 feet long and weighs 200 pounds. They walk a mile in 30 minutes. Their horns are magnificent and are highly polished. Their owner has the oxen groomed every day, and their coats shine like satin. On a level they have pulled 11,061 pounds of stone loaded on a dray, moving it 8 feet in one draw. This is a world record pull. They are fed from 8 to 12 quarts of corn and oats ground together, 2 quarts of flax meal and from 6 to 8 quarts of bran every day.—New York Tribune.

Homeless Kate, the Box Car.

"Jack my drivers, but it's Homeless Kate! Why, Kate, ain't there no gettin you back to your friends? There's 40 chasers out for you from your road if there's one. Who's holdin you now?"

"Wish I knew," said Homeless Kate. "I belong in Topeka, but I've bin to Cedar Rapids; I've bin to Winnipeg; I've bin to Newport News; I've bin all down the old Atlanta and West Point, an I've bin to Buffalo. Maybe I'll fetch up at Haverstraw. I've only bin out ten months, but I'm homesick, I'm just achin homesick."

"Try Chicago, Katie," said the switching loco, and the battered old car lumbered down the track, jolting, "I want to be in Kansas when the sunflowers bloom."

"Yard's full o' Homeless Kates an Wanderin Willies," he explained to .007. "I knew an old Fitchburg flatcar out 17 months, an one of ours was gone 15 'fore ever we got track of her. Dunno quite how our men fix it. Swap around, I guess."—Rudyard Kipling in Scribner's.

Gold In Barnato's Body.

A German paper is responsible for the announcement that Barney Barnato, still more than the legendary king of Peru, who was wont to have his body gilded afresh every morning, deserved the title of El Dorado—the "Man of Gold"—not because of his wealth or of his connection with gold mines, but because his system actually secreted gold. He was, says this credible authority, the victim of a disease called metallitis, his blood being permeated with a powdery gold, as were his eyes, nose, ears and all of his mucous membrane. The pain caused by this condition was so intolerable that it is believed to have been the cause of his suicide.

SONOMA, SEPTEMBER 25, 1897.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

If the citizens of this town will uphold our law officers there will be no necessity of the use of a club in making arrests. Offenders will then know who is who and will peacefully submit.

The victory won in Judge Cheney's court last Wednesday by Deputy Sheriff Chas. Ohm has struck terror into the hearts of evil-doers and their sympathizers. This community can now feel that they have an officer in their midst who will do his duty without fear or favor.

The shameful spectactle of the Chief of the Sonoma Volunteer Fire Department applauding with clapping of hands and stamping of feet the discharge of a disreputable hobo was witnessed in Justice Cheney's court last Wednesday. Such action ill becomes a public official and we trust that in future Chief Poppe will not let his feelings get away with his better judgment. The lawless element in this community must be suppressed and not encouraged.

With taxes at $1.50 this year a number of people in this county are agitating the appointment of a Game Warden. Better agitate something, gentlemen, that will lessen the county's expenses and not increase them. The farmer is in no condition this year to expend from $600 to $1000 for the purpose of protecting the predatory quail in order that the voracious bird may feed off his vineyards and get fat to afford sport for the city shooter during the open season. The appointment of a Game Warden, we admit, would make a soft place for somebody, but would entail a wanton waste of money, as there is very little hunting out of season in this county.

COUNTY TAXES.

The Levy Fixed at $1.50—It was $1.28 Last Year.

Taxes will be higher this year in Sonoma county than for many years past. Last year the levy was $1.28. This year it has been fixed at $1.50 outside of incorporated towns and cities. The raise will not be good reading for the property-owners, who will no doubt be as mad as hornets when they realize that instead of a lower rate, which they had every reason to expect, they will have to pay 22 cents more on every $100 of valuation than last year.

On Monday last the Board of Supervisors met in Santa Rosa in special session to fix the tax levy for Sonoma county for the year 1897-98. The Board was busy all the morning figuring on the assessment and Monday afternoon the following motion was made by Supervisor Glynn:

"I move that it be made the order of the Board that the rates be and they are hereby fixed and levied to be collected on each one hundred dollars valuation of the taxable property of the county of Sonoma, State of California, for the several hereinafter named funds for the fiscal year 1897-98; viz. indigent fund .09, bond fund .02, general fund .34, school fund .22, road fund .35, county rate $1.02, state rate .51, total for county and state $1.53." Seconded by Supervisor Austin.

The roll was called on the motion and the vote was as follows: Putnam, Hayden, Austin, Gray, Noes. Glynn, Aye. The motion was declared lost.

Then Supervisor Putnam moved that the rate be fixed as in Mr. Glynn's motion with the exception that the road tax be fixed at .30. Supervisor Austin seconded. The motion was lost the vote being Glynn, Hayden, Austin, Gray, Noes. Putnam, Aye.

Supervisor Hayden moved that the road tax be fixed at .32 and the rest of the levy be fixed as in Mr. Glynn's motion. Supervisor Austin seconded. The roll was called as follows: Hayden, Austin, Gray, Ayes. Putnam, Glynn, Noes.

The rate for this year will be $1.50. Last year the levy was $1.28. On account of the great reduction of the county assessment made by the State Board of Equalization the levy had to be raised.

The Board then considered the fixing of the levy upon bonded school districts and the apportionment of railroad assessments.

Diphtheria has broken out in Bloomfield. The public schools have been closed on account of the great danger. Everything is being done to prevent the disease from spreading.

There is a movement on foot among the dairymen of this county to have the Board of Health of San Francisco test the cows of Sonoma county with tuberculin. Provision will be made also to test all of the beef cattle. This weeding out of diseased cattle will result in great good to all.

Back from the Grave

We cannot come, but we can often stay our progress thither. Disease, like everything else, must have a beginning. All chronic maladies tend to shorten life, and render it a species of martyrdom while they last. Malaria, kidney complaint, chronic indigestion, rheumatism—all have small beginnings and may be stayed at the outset with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This excellent tonic and alterative is adapted alike to the prevention of disorders of the system and to their removal, and its early use cannot be too strongly advocated. To renew appetite and insure tranquil rest, there is no surer and pleasanter means than the Bitters. The effects of overwork and exhaustion, mental or physical, are counteracted by it, and the busy merchant, the tired clerk or operative, and the brain weary student, author or newspaper man, derive from it pleasant relief and future energy.

Almost Blind

Scrofula Affects the Eyes—Little Boy Treated by an Oculist Without Relief—But Now He Is Well.

"When my little boy was three months old his eyes became very sore and he was almost blind. I took him to an oculist who treated him for six months, and left him as bad as he was at the beginning. Finally Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I began giving it to him. In less than three weeks he was able to go into the sun without covering his eyes, and today his eyes are perfectly well, and his ears and nose, which were badly affected, are also well. Hood's Sarsaparilla has certainly done wonders for my boy." Mrs. James H. Painter, Amador, California. Remember

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

Accident.

Willie Chase, the fourteen-year-old grandson of J. B. Chase the well-known horseman, met with an accident on the Seipp farm, last Saturday, that cost him the loss of a finger. He was trying to crush an apple in a cider press when by some means or another the middle finger of his right hand got caught in the cog wheels of the press and was badly mashed. He was taken to Dr. Davis' office and the finger was cut off just above the first joint. The little fellow has been very unfortunate the past year. About eleven months ago while crossing a street in San Francisco a large truck ran over his left foot and injured the member so badly that it had to be amputated.

LAW AND ORDER WILL PREVAIL

A SILLY CHARGE AGAINST DEPUTY SHERIFF OHM FAILS.

He is Still on Deck and Will Preserve the Peace at all Hazards.

On Monday evening a tramp by the name of Jas. Donovan, who had been "hoboing" along the banks of Sonoma Creek for some time past, made his appearance in town in an intoxicated condition. Deputy Sheriff Chas. Ohm's attention was called to the man and he ordered him to leave town else he would lock him up. The tramp signified his willingness to get out of town and started down Napa street. Shortly after he returned and hunting up the officer called him a vile name and defied him. Donovan was again admonished to leave town. He again defied the officer and showed fight. Whereupon Deputy Sheriff Ohm seized the vicious "hobo" and attempted to arrest him. A struggle ensued and in order to subdue the desperado he was compelled to use his club on him, after which the fellow submitted to arrest and was locked up for the night. The officer did not care to swear out a warrant against Donovan, as he considered the offender had been sufficiently punished, and he ordered him turned loose the following morning in order to save the county expenses.

Shortly after regaining his freedom Donovan appeared before Judge Cheney and on the ill-advice of enemies of Officer Ohm swore out a warrant for the arrest of the officer on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

The warrant was served by City Marshal Robin and the Deputy Sheriff was released on his own recognizance, and the examination was set for Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

In the meantime Cellar Master Della Diedi of the Victoria Winery went before Judge Cheney and swore out a warrant against Donovan, charging him with assault with a deadly weapon, and in a short time the ruffian, who had caused the officer's arrest, was again in durance vile.

On Wednesday both cases came up before Judge Cheney for preliminary examination. Deputy Sheriff Ohm was defended by Senator John S. Enos and Assistant District Attorney Butts conducted the prosecution of both cases. The hobo, Donovan, who was evidently an old offender, conducted his own defense in a manner that would have done credit to a Philadelphia lawyer.

The hobo's case was first called and the Judge, after hearing the testimony of both Della Diedi and Donovan, discharged the defendant from custody, as the evidence was not deemed sufficient to secure a conviction. The prisoner's offense consisted of going to the the Victoria wine cellar and demanding a jug of wine and upon the cellar master refusing to comply with his demand Donovan pulled out a large butcher knife. This frightened the cellar master, who rushed into his house and secured a six-shooter and Donovan fled. Hence his arrest.

The examination of Deputy Sheriff Ohm then took place and it was proven by five or six citizens that Donovan had assaulted and defied officer Ohm and he was perfectly justified in using his club. He was thereupon discharged from custody.

His discharge is considered a great victory for law and order in this town and a stunning rebuke to those who had instigated the arrest of a fearless officer who has been a terror to tramps, firebugs and thieves in this valley the past few months.

The picturesque home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Appleton, located some three miles north of Sonoma, was the scene of a unique gathering on Friday evening of last week. The affair was a rag social and caused much laughter and merriment as one by one the company appeared in their old clothes, and yet there were many who wore bright and pretty costumes. Vocal and instrumental music was rendered, which was enjoyed by all. The refreshments, which were daintly served, were as pleasing to the eye as to the taste. About 35 or 40 people attended and each voted that the Appleton home was a delightful place for entertainment.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, SEPT. 25, 1897.

The Shocked Samaritan.

The man who knew a little of everything looked at the passenger in the seat ahead of him and finally leaned forward.

"Excuse me," he said, "but you really ought to shake off the cares of business and go somewhere for complete rest and quiet."

"You mind your own affairs," said the other man gruffly.

The sympathetic passenger looked hurt.

"Of course," he said, "your case is nothing to me. I only proffered the advice in a spirit of friendliness. At the same time anybody can see at a glance that you are suffering from too close confinement."

"There, now, let up on that," said the gruff man. "I don't want any more of your chaff."

"What's money to a man in your condition?" said the sympathetic passenger without heeding the rebuke.

"Mighty little," growled the gruff passenger.

"You'll never pardon yourself for this neglect," said the sympathetic passenger.

"I wish I could," said the gruff man.

"What you need is to get out and drink in the free air of nature," said the sympathetic passenger.

"You bet it is," chuckled the gruff man.

His chuckle turned to a laugh that shook him so thoroughly that something tinkled at his wrists. He held up his arms, and lo! he was handcuffed. Turning to the horrified passenger, he hoarsely whispered:

"Ten years in the pen, ha, ha, ha!"

And the sympathetic philanthropist sank back in his seat dumb with horror. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wide Open.

"That man can get anything he wants in here without money," said the waiter as a little man left the cafe carrying a box of cigars.

"How's that—an old friend?"

"No. It was this way: The boss had been running this joint a long time, and he didn't know what the trouble was; first class location and everything bang up, but people would pass us by, and we couldn't pull 'em in. One day this little fellow comes along and asks how business is. The boss tells him the truth. 'It's on the bum,' says he. 'Do you know why?' asks the man. 'No,' says the boss. 'I'll tell you,' says the man, and he shows the boss how the door is too narrow, and how you have to turn a corner to get in, and how there is a big sign and a railing in the way, and the cashier's desk blocks the window and you can't see the tables from the walk. Well, the boss spends a lot of money and fixes everything different, makes a wide door, as you see, and puts the tables so you can look at the clean linen from the walk, and you wouldn't believe it, but the people just flocked in in droves and we've been on Easy street ever since. New York people like a wide open game, and they won't go against anything dark."—New York Telegram.

A Novel Way to Catch Eels.

An interesting story concerning the faculty for association of ideas in fishes comes from the West Indies. On one of the islands an old man was in the habit of assembling great numbers of eels near the surface of the water by the simple device of striking one pebble upon another, thus producing a short, sharp sound. On account of this faculty he was for a long time believed by the other natives to be a sorcerer, a reputation which he probably liked to have, for he made no effort to avoid it, and it was by accident that it was discovered that the clinking of the pebbles was always succeeded by the throwing of bread and scraps of other food upon the water. The eels had become accustomed to connecting the two incidents, and never failed to appear, in the certainty of receiving food, when they heard the sound of the pebbles.

Unfortunately for the confidence of the eels in human nature, as soon as the natives discovered the old man's tricks they imitated it to their own benefit and captured the eels as fast as they appeared.—New York Commercial.

William Lloyd Garrison.

William Lloyd Garrison, a son of the famous abolitionist, said of his father in a recent lecture in Boston: "At home Mr. Garrison was cheerful. His sense of the ludicrous was very marked. He was passionately fond of music and had a habit of singing through the house. Babies were a delight to him and would be good with him when the mother could not soothe them. He was very fond of puns. When the servant failed, he helped in the kitchen. When there was sickness, he was a wonderful nurse. At table he made the conversation general and drew out the most timid."

Apples and Sleep.

A French writer has been collecting medical opinions about apples. An American doctor says that apples contain more phosphorus than any other fruit or indeed any kind of vegetable and advises the eating of an apple before going to bed at night. Apples, says a well known French doctor, induce a more quiet sleep than chloral or opium.

Two Sly Maidens.

"I think Tom is going to propose soon. He is always telling me how rapidly his business is growing."

"I know a better sign than that. Jack never calls without asking all about papa's business."—Harlem Life.

A leading geographical authority claims that there are 300 mountains in the United States which exceed 10,000 feet in height.

It is not a true apology for any coarseness to say that it is natural.—Thoreau.

THE BEST KNOWN FACE.

One Hundred Likenesses of Queen Victoria For Every Living Person.

No man or woman who ever lived has had his or her features reproduced oftener than her majesty the queen, says the Boston Herald. The number of actual photographs of her majesty in existence cannot be recorded, and there are besides millions of reproductions. Take the number of stamps sold in the United Kingdom during the queen's reign. The number of articles passing through English, Scotch, Welsh and Irish postoffices in a recent year was nearly 3,000,000, and, though, of course, that figure need not be taken as an average, it is not going beyond the mark to say that since the accession of the queen over 60,000,000,000 postal di patches have passed through the postoffices of Great Britain. Every one of these would bear at least one stamp and many of them two or three, and every stamp bears the image of the queen. Eighty thousand million images of her majesty must have gone through the post during her record reign.

Then the record of the mint is by no means a small one since the coronation. It is estimated that about 6,000,000,000 coins in gold, silver and bronze have passed through the hands of her majesty's subjects, each coin bearing the features of the sovereign. Her image has been reproduced often enough to present 100 likenesses to every man, woman and child on the globe. Without doubt the queen's is the best known face in the world.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the Sonoma Index-Tribune and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietor of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.
